DRY FLIES

Fly-Tyers Brand dry flies are accepted by the trade and by anglers everywhere as the standard American dry fly. Because it takes years to make a fly-tyer capable of meeting our quality requirements for these flies, our production for this season will be again somewhat limited. The full range of patterns is, however, again available although some of the exotic natural feathers remain scarce.

DIVIDED-WING DRY FLIES

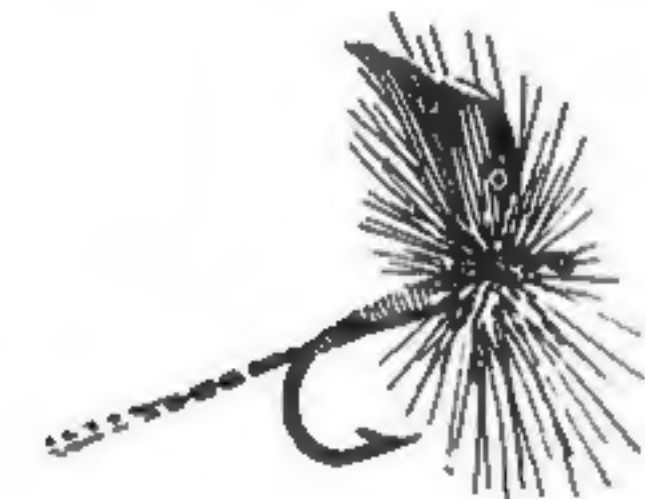

These exquisitely made English style dry flies have matched divided wings and are of the highest quality throughout. Wings are cocked well forward. Tied on "Perfect" hooks, the highest quality hook available.

"AIRLITE" FLY DRESSING With Silicon Oil

Our improved fly dressing now contains the famous war-developed SILICON OIL with which remarkable results are obtained in floating flies. Flies thoroughly dressed with "Airlite" will float for hours without redressing. Wide mouthed bottles for dipping flies. One half dozen bottles in attractive display box.

WET FLIES

Wet flies make up an important part of any trout fisherman's kit. If they are good wet flies, they are tied with a soft, sleazy hackle pointing toward the tail of the fly, and with body and wings thinly dressed. Heavily dressed wet flies are hard to sink quickly and are considerably less effective. In recent years the trend has been towards eyed wet flies which are furnished without snells. This eliminates loops and snell rot at the eye of the hook.

MATCHED-WING WET FLIES

This is our standard wet fly. A distinctive feature that will be quickly apparent to the angler is their comparatively slim and delicate dressing and the proper angle at which the wings are placed. Supplied either snelled or unsnelled on "Perfect" turn-down eye hooks.

Nymphs Boost the Sale
On Fine Leaders

Among the most successful trout anglers, especially on well whipped streams, are those who use nymphs on long, fine-pointed leaders. Nymphs and extra-length leaders go hand-in-hand and the well-stocked tackle department will offer both to its customers.

Creepers Nymphs

These hard-bodied nymphs match closely in color and shape the larva on which trout feed consistently. Popular everywhere.

STREAMER FLIES

Originally streamers were popular largely in the East, but in recent years their attractiveness to really big trout has brought them into wide use throughout the country. Fly-Tyers Brand streamers are beautifully tied on long-shank hooks with the "wing" so placed that it lies well down on the body but does not wrap itself around the hook when casting, a fault with streamers of some other makes. When being fished properly they resemble a swimming minnow and are especially useful for early season fishing.

"NEW ENGLAND" STREAMERS

These patterns have taken large trout from New England waters for years. Other sections are just beginning to appreciate their taking qualities and we highly recommend them for any water where large trout are found. Tied on long shank Limerick hooks with looped turned down eyes.

WINGED BASS FLIES

The standard bass fly with most anglers is the winged type, which is similar to a trout fly but over-sized and, usually, with a wider wing. Good winged bass flies are made with a whole wing tip in order that it will retain its shape when in the water. Fly-Tyers Brand winged bass flies are unsurpassed in quality.

SALMON FLIES

Until World War I, the best salmon flies were tied in Scotland. Today, and for several years, Fly-Tyers has equalled or bettered the best Scotch ties, and we now tie these exquisite examples of what is almost a lost art, for most of the noted sporting goods houses of America.

SALMON WET FLIES

All Fly-Tyers salmon flies are tied true to pattern. Many of the exotic feathers used are rare and costly. All our salmon flies are tied on imported japanned, hollow-point hooks which are the world's finest. Turned-up looped eyes.
